

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

HISTORY OF SAVINGS BANKS.

THE beneficent spirit of the present age is, in nothing more remarkably displayed, than in the combined energy with which individuals of the highest ranks of society are labouring to promote the welfare of the lower orders.

In order to convey an impression of the imperious necessity of Saving Institutions for the industrious Poor, the following striking passage from "Sir Thomas Bernard's introductory Letter to the third volume of the Reports of the Society for bettering the condition of the Poor," is quoted; "The poor laws of England have held out a false and deceitful encouragement to population. They promise that unqualified support, that unrestricted maintenance to the cottager's family, which it is not possible for them to supply, thereby inducing the young labourer to marry before he has made any provision for the married state; and, in consequence, extinguishing all prospective prudence, and all consideration for the future."

The establishment of male Friendly Societies, for nearly a century past, has, to a certain extent, counteracted the pressure of poor rates, and the growth of those baneful habits of dependence, which it cannot be denied that poor rates are calculated to produce. By the different Acts which have been passed for the encouragement of Friendly Societies, much good has been done; as, in these, no attempts have been made to alter the popular frame of these associations, far less to render the entrance into them compulsory.

The advantages which have arisen, both to the individual contributors and to the public, from these societies, have been great; and it is very gratifying to observe, that in most parts of the United Kingdom, female Friendly Societies have also been formed. Much has been said of the dangerous purposes to which these associations may be turned. The late Mr. Rose, certainly not a partial judge in such a case, intimates that he believes such apprehensions to be chimerical, and expressly declares, that "though he has sought anxiously for information on that head, he has not been able to discover a single instance where those consequences have followed, in the case of a society whose rules were registered according to law." To the truth of this assertion, the Editor of the present Work is able to testify; for, though since the passing of the 10 Geo. 4, c. 56, intituled, "An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to Friendly Societies," the rules of a considerable number of societies from all parts of England and Wales have been submitted to him for his inspection and certificate; and although in some instances the contingencies insured against were not natural or within the provisions or intentions of the legislature, yet in no one instance have the rules of any enrolled society (which have come before him) been framed so as to enable the funds to be applied to any dangerous or unconstitutional purposes.

To detect the commencement, and to prevent the progress of such evil consequences, the Editor of the Quarterly Review (October 1816) justly observes, that an easy expedient occurs: Let the wealthy and intelligent members of the community become honorary or ordinary members of the Friendly Societies in their neighbourhood; they will thus be entitled to vote at the election of officers, to give their opinion in cases of importance, and to awe into silence those turbulent spirits who may wish to propagate mischief. The higher ranks may be assured that their aid, not only in contributing to the funds, but in making the proper arrangements, is much wanted, and will be gladly and gratefully received and acknowledged; indeed they can scarcely purchase so much popularity at so trifling an expense. Their donations and contributions would be doubly acceptable, as they would be given without the prospect of a return; and this feeling, it is well known, has a powerful influence in adding to the respect which poverty and ignorance are disposed to pay to intelligence and wealth. The Editor of the present publication cannot omit here noticing how much both the public and the well wishers of institutions of this nature are indebted to the Rev. J. T. Becher, M.A. of Southwell, for his valuable publication on the constitution of Friendly Societies upon legal and scientific principles, as well as for his constant and unremitting exertions to promote the welfare of the industrious classes, in the furtherance of which no personal labour or expense has at any time been regarded.

Friendly Societies partake of the nature of insurances on life, by promising certain advantages in the event of certain natural contingencies. They are preferable, however, to common insurance offices, inasmuch as the members insure each other, and retain all the profits in their own hands for the general advantage. There is also a benevolent principle intimately blended with Friendly Societies, which leads those who form them to be concerned for each other's welfare, and to consult for each other's good. Admirable, however, as this principle is, and excellent as are the institutions with which it is connected, the benefits to be derived from them by the individual members are often distant, and in their very nature uncertain. Industrious persons have been known, who have regularly contributed to Friendly Societies for years without receiving a shilling from the funds. Something more, therefore, seemed to be wanting, in order to complete the system of encouragement to saving, which the legislative support of Friendly Societies had begun, and the desideratum has been happily supplied by the institution of BANKS for SAVINGS. In No. 59 of "The Report of the Society for bettering the condition of the Poor," there is an interesting account of a benevolent Institution formed by the Rev. Joseph Smith at Wendover, in 1799, and supported by him and two of his parishioners. In order to induce their industrious neighbours to save part of their earnings, these worthy persons circulated Proposals, offering to receive, indiscriminately, from the men, women and children of the parish, any sum, from twopence upwards, every Sunday evening during the summer months, to keep an exact account of the sums deposited, and to repay to each individual at Christmas, the amount of his deposit, with the addition of one-third to the whole as a bounty for his economy. It was expressly and wisely stipulated, that the depositors might receive back the sums respectively due to them at any time before Christmas on demand, and that the fruit of their economy should not preclude them from parish relief in case of sickness or want of employment: a comfortable addition at home, to the family Christmas dinner, was to finish the year's account. These curious Proposals are ushered in by a text, which, though not applied to its original purpose, is as a motto sufficiently appropriate, "Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him." The peasantry of the parish readily embraced the offer held out to them, and during the first season sixty subscribers brought their weekly savings with great regularity; none deposited less than sixpence, and the greater number one shilling each. The next institution of this kind, and one much more nearly resembling the present Savings Banks, was called the Charitable Bank, and was founded at Tottenham. It is worthy of remark (as showing how frequently one good design generates another) that the success of the little Bank for children, formed in the same place in 1798, gave rise to the more extensive plan in 1804. It was begun for the express purpose of providing a safe and profitable place of deposit for the savings of labourers, servants, &c.; and opened once a month for receipt and payment. The books were at first kept by a lady; six wealthy individuals were appointed to act as trustees, each of whom agreed to receive an equal part of the sums deposited, and each to be responsible to the amount of 100*l.* for the repayment of the principal with interest. Any sum above one shilling was to be received; and to encourage perseverance, interest at the rate of five per cent was to be allowed for every 20*s.* which should remain a year with the trustees. Though the number of trustees at first was limited, it was agreed that for every additional 100*l.* a new trustee should be chosen, so that the loss to the trustees in fulfilling their engagements must have been inconsiderable. The benefits of this institution were to be confined exclusively to the labouring classes; but there was no restriction as to the residence of the depositors. One great advantage of a Savings Bank is, that it holds out to the lower classes fixed advantages, and preserves their little property from that fluctuation of value to which the Public Funds are liable. In 1808, a society was formed at Bath, for the purpose of receiving and allowing interest at four per cent, for the savings of industrious and respectable servants. Eight individuals, four were ladies, took on themselves the chief management and responsibility. No depositor could lodge more than 50*l.*; and the maximum of the collective sums was limited to 2,000*l.*

From this indication of facts, it is plain, to quote the words of the Quarterly Review (from which the previous observations are principally taken,) that though attempts have been made, at different times in the course of the last forty years, to introduce schemes of a nature similar to what are now called Savings Banks, yet, till the year 1810, there had been no plan devised for general use, and no public interest excited in behalf of such institutions.

Mr. Henry Duncan states, that early in 1810, while he was engaged in some inquiries relative to the condition of the poor, he read a pamphlet, proposing a scheme for the gradual abolition of poor rates in England. To this plan the author, Mr. Bone, gave the whimsical title of "Tranquillity." Mr. Duncan, though he considered the scheme too complicated for general use, conceived that one of its subordinate provisions, which proposed the establishment of an economical bank for the savings of the industrious, might be so modified as to be carried separately into effect with great advantage. He accordingly published a paper giving an account of it, and proposing, that the gentlemen of Dumfriesshire should establish banks for savings in the different parishes of the county. His zeal was applauded, but his recommendation was neglected. Steady, however, in the pursuit of his object, and rejoicing in the prospect of the benefit which he anticipated from it, he resolved to bring his plan to the test of experiment, by such an establishment in his own parish. To this he gave the name of "The Parish Bank Friendly Society of Ruthwell." Its capital amounted at the time of publishing the second edition of his Essay, to a sum exceeding 1,400*l*.

It appears, therefore, on the whole, that though some institutions similar both in their principles and details, had been formed before the Parish Bank of Ruthwell, yet it was the first of the kind which was regularly and minutely organized and brought before the public; and further, that as that society gave the impulse which is fast spreading through the kingdom, it is in all fairness entitled to the appellation of the Parent Society. If we spoke of the original Society, the Charitable Bank at Tottenham would be entitled to that appellation.

Although previous to the year 1817 there were no less than seventy Savings Banks established in England, four in Wales, and four in Ireland, it was not till that period that any legislative provisions were made relating to these institutions. On the 11th July 1817, the 57 Geo. 3, c. 105, was passed, intituled, "An Act to encourage the Establishment of Banks for Savings in IRELAND;" and on the 12th July in the same year, the 57 Geo. 3, c. 130, was passed, to encourage the establishment of Banks for Savings in ENGLAND. Under these Acts, the trustees and managers (who were prohibited from receiving any profit, benefit or advantage from the institution) were required to enrol the Rules of the Institution at the sessions, and the depositor was restricted to the investment of 50*l.* in each year, in Ireland; in England, the amount allowed to be invested was 100*l.* the first year, and 50*l.* every year afterwards, except in the case of Friendly Societies, which were not limited to any amount. The money received from depositors, when it amounted to the sum of 50*l.* was allowed to be paid by the trustees into the Banks of Ireland or England respectively, to the account of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and placed in an account, denominated, "The Fund for the Banks for Savings." For the amount so invested, the trustees received a debenture, carrying interest at the rate of three-pence per centum per diem, or 4*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* per cent per annum, payable half-yearly in May and November. The interest usually paid to the depositors was four per cent per annum, or one halfpenny per month on fifteen shillings. The depositor in a Savings Bank established under either of these Acts was not restricted in the amount of the sum he invested, although his annual payments were limited; neither was he prevented from investing at the same time in as many different Savings Banks as he thought proper. Other provisions were also made, for exempting all instruments from stamp duty, as well as the probate and letters of administration, when the deceased depositor's effects were under a certain amount; and in case of dispute between the Institution and a depositor, the same was to be settled by arbitration.

By the 38 Geo. 3. c. 48, (30 May 1818) intituled, "An Act to amend an Act passed in the last session of Parliament to encourage the establishment of Banks for Savings in England," certain alterations were made in the mode of investment by the trustees; central banks were allowed to invest the money of branch banks; and the Justices at sessions were authorized to reject any rules of Savings Banks deposited with the clerk of the peace for enrolment, if they disapproved of them. By the 1 Geo. 4. c. 83, (24 July 1820) intituled, "An Act to amend two Acts of the fifty-seventh and fifty-eighth years of his late Majesty for the encouragement of Banks for Savings in England," the provisions respecting debentures were repealed, and the mode of investment by the trustees was again altered; fresh provisions were also made respecting the withdrawing of money by the trustees or their agent. Charitable societies were by this Act allowed to subscribe any portion of their funds, and the trustees of Savings Banks were authorized from time to time to make rules for the application of the profits amongst the depositors.

By the 5 Geo. 4. c. 62, (17 June 1824,) intituled, "An Act to amend the several Acts for the encouragement of Banks for Savings in England and Ireland," all the provisions in the former Acts relating to the issuing of debentures to the trustees of banks in Ireland were repealed, and others enacted, similar to those which were then in existence relating to those institutions in England. It was also provided by this Act, that no application of the surplus funds of any Savings Bank in England or Ireland should be made until after the expiration of ten years from the date of the first establishment of the institution. Further alterations were made in the mode of investment by the trustees. Deposits of any one depositor were not to exceed 50*l.* on the first year after 20 November 1824, nor 30*l.* in any one year after, nor beyond 200*l.* in the whole, exclusive of interest. Depositors having made their full deposit in any year might withdraw such sums, and again subscribe to the same amount. Persons were allowed to subscribe as trustees on behalf of others. Charitable Societies were prevented from investing any of their funds. Subscribers to one Savings Bank were not to subscribe to another. Deposits might be withdrawn from one Savings Bank to be placed in another. The trustees were obliged to invest the money of depositors with the Commissioners. Security was required to be given by persons receiving salary, &c. The accounts were required to be made up annually, and transmitted to the Commissioners, and a duplicate affixed in the office of the Savings Bank, &c.

By the 9 Geo. 4. c. 92, (28 July 1828), intituled, "An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to Savings Banks," all the previous Acts were repealed; the rules of every Savings Bank are to be signed by two trustees, and submitted to a Barrister appointed by the Commissioners for the reduction of the National Debt, for his certificate, previously to their being deposited with the clerk of the peace, s. 4. Justices may reject or confirm rules, s. 4. No treasurer, trustee or manager, shall derive any benefit from any deposit, or directly or indirectly have any salary, allowance, profit or benefit from the Institution, beyond their actual expenses for the purposes of the institution, s. 6. Every treasurer, actuary or cashier entrusted with the receipt of money, and every officer, &c. receiving salary or allowance, must give security by bond, to be approved of by not less than two trustees and three managers, s. 7. Effects of institutions are declared to be vested in trustees for the time being, s. 8. No trustee or manager is personally liable, except for his own acts and deeds, and not then, except in cases of wilful neglect or default, s. 9. Treasurers, &c. to account and deliver up effects upon demand of two trustees and three managers; in case of default, application may be made to Justices at sessions, s. 10. The money belonging to Savings Banks must be invested in Bank of England or Ireland, in names of Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, s. 11. Bank of England or Ireland, on receiving 50 l. from Savings Bank on account of Commissioners, &c. to place the sum to account called "The Funds for the Banks for Savings;" and trustees to make declaration that the money belongs exclusively to institution, s. 11. Not to prevent trustees from receiving money from depositors to be applied in any other manner, s. 12. Central Banks may invest money of branch banks, s. 13. Monies paid in on Savings Banks account, to be invested in purchase of bank annuities or exchequer bills, s. 15. On payment of money to account of Commissioners, &c. their officers to give a receipt for the same, carrying interest at $2\frac{1}{2}$ d. per cent. per diem, chargeable on the stock or exchequer bills standing in names of Commissioners, s. 16. Interest due on money mentioned in receipt to be calculated, half-yearly, up to 20 May and 20 November, and carried to account of Savings Bank as additional principal, s. 17. The mode of drawing the money by the trustees is directed in s. 18 to 21; and by s. 22, provision was made for the application of the surplus fund to 20 November 1828; from 20 November 1828, the surplus is to be annually transferred to the Commissioners, who are to keep a separate account thereof, subject at all times to the claim of the trustees, when required for the purposes of the institution by which it has been so transferred, s. 23. The interest payable to depositors must not exceed 3l. 8s. 5½ d. per cent per annum, s. 24. Savings of minors may be invested, s. 25. The trustees are authorized, in certain cases, to pay money to married women in respect of deposits made by them, s. 26. Charitable Societies may invest sums not exceeding 100 l. per annum, or 300 l. in the whole, exclusive of interest, s. 27. Friendly societies, legally established previous to 28 July 1828, may deposit any part of their funds; but friendly societies established after that day, can only invest to the amount of 300 l. principal and interest included, s. 28.

Every depositor must disclose his or her name, together with his or her profession, business, calling and residence, and the same to be entered in the books of the institution, s. 32. Persons allowed to subscribe as trustees in behalf of others, whether the trustees are themselves depositors or not; deposits to be entered in the joint names, but the receipt of the trustee, &c. to be valid, s. 33. Subscribers to one savings bank shall not subscribe to any other; declaration to be made at the time of subscription; if declaration false, deposit forfeited to the sinking fund, s. 34. Deposit of any one depositor shall not exceed 30 l. in any one year, nor beyond 150 l. in the whole; when sum amounts to 200 l. no interest payable, s. 35. Not to effect deposits of or above 200 l. on the 28th July 1828; but the trustees not to receive fresh deposits from persons whose deposits amount to 150 l., s. 36, 37. Depositors may withdraw their deposits and again subscribe, provided the sum deposited in any one year does not exceed 30 l. additional principal money, s. 38. Deposits may be withdrawn from one Savings Bank and placed in another, s. 39. Depositor dying, leaving money in institution exceeding 50 l. probate or administration must be taken out; but where the whole estate, &c. of depositor does not exceed 50 l. no stamp duty is chargeable thereon, &c.; certificate of amount and value of depositor's interest to be given by trustees, and produced on claiming probate, &c., s. 40, 41. Where the money due to a depositor dying intestate shall not exceed 50 l. the same may be divided according to the rules of the institution, if the trustees are satisfied that no will was made and that no letters of administration will be taken out; in the event of there being no rules, &c. the division to be made according to the Statute of Distributions, s. 41. Payment to persons appearing to be next of kin, declared valid, s. 42. Payments under probates of wills, &c. afterwards repealed, shall be valid, s. 43. Powers of attorney, &c. given by trustees or depositors, not liable to stamp duty, s. 44. Where disputes arise, same to be referred to arbitrators, and, in case of their not agreeing, to be settled by the Barrister, s. 45. Savings Banks to make up, annually, account of their progress, &c. stating the balance, and in whose hands, and transmit such account, within six weeks after the 20th day of November in each year, to the Commissioners; if trustees neglect to deliver such returns, commissioners may close their accounts, &c. s. 46. A duplicate of such account to be affixed in the office of the Savings Bank, and depositor entitled to printed copy on payment of one penny, s. 47. Account shall be annually laid before Parliament by Commissioners, of gross amount of all sums received and credited, &c. s. 48. Savings Banks to compute interest to 20th May and 20th November, half-yearly or yearly, s. 49. The remaining clauses of the Act apply solely to the transactions of the Commissioners in reference to the purchase and sale of Exchequer Bills. &c. and therefore are not considered to be of sufficient importance to be noticed at greater length in the present publication.

- That the interference of the Legislature in taking these institutions under its protection must be highly advantageous to the industrious classes, as well as to the public at large, must be evident at the first sight of our labouring population, especially when it is considered that in addition to the positive advantages arising to the poor, whom it is professed to have principally in view, collateral benefits are derived from the plan by no means immaterial. Every person who has vested his savings in the public funds has a stake in the security of the country, proportioned not merely to the sum total of those savings, but to the value of that sum to himself, and will be deterred from compassing the disturbance of his native land by a personal motive, added to the influence of duty. He will feel the importance of public peace and public credit with that strong conviction which individual interest never fails to inspire: and in answer to the objections of those who would be jealous of the support thus obtained to the ruling powers, it should be observed, that he who possesses property in a country is not interested in the stability of the administration for the time being, but in the perpetual stability of universal order and good government.

From the following pages it will be seen, that on the 20th November 1829, to which day the last official returns were made, there were 487 Savings Banks, established in England, Wales, and Ireland, with a capital of nearly fifteen millions; and as from the returns made by 468 of them, there were no less than four hundred and nine thousand nine hundred and forty-five accounts open, out of which there were two hundred and three thousand six hundred and ninety-one depositors under 20*l.* each, the average amount of each such depositor being 7*l.* 4*s.* 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; and that there were only four thousand nine hundred and seventy-nine depositors above 200*l.* their average being 245*l.* 4*s.* 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. each; it is evident that these institutions have not been abused in the manner generally supposed, but that they are what the Legislature originally intended them to be, places of deposit for the custody and increase of small savings belonging to the industrious classes of His Majesty's subjects. And from the Editor's correspondence with the several Savings Banks, he has great pleasure in stating, that though since the 20th November 1829, the total amount of the sum then invested may not have increased, on account of some of the large sums having been withdrawn; yet that the number and amount of the smaller depositors has been, and still is, increasing.

To those Noblemen, Clergymen, and others who have come forward, and assisted by their donations as well as personal exertions, in the establishment and support of Savings Banks, the thanks of every well-wisher of the prosperity and happiness of his country are due, particularly when it is considered that from the establishment of these institutions to the present time, the whole management (with the exception of the office of secretary) is not only undertaken and conducted gratuitously, but in all cases has been, and in many instances is now, attended with expense to the trustees and managers.

In the following pages, the Editor has arranged the different Savings Banks according to counties; and after a Summary of the number of Depositors, &c. and the average amount in each county, the institutions will be found in alphabetical order, with the date of the establishment of each, the place where held, the days and hours when open, and the rate of interest payable, &c. At page 234 will be found a Summary of the Savings Banks, &c. in England; at page 263, of those in Wales; and at page 323, of those in Ireland; at pages 324-5, a Summary of the whole contained in England, Wales and Ireland; at pages 326-7, an account of the Total Number of Persons receiving dividends at the Bank of England in October 1829, and January 1830; and at pages 328-9, the Account relating to Savings Banks and Friendly Societies, presented to Parliament in February last by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, pursuant to 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, s. 48.

In preparing this Work for publication, no pains or personal exertions have been spared, the Editor having himself examined, at the National Debt Office, the whole of the Returns, before and after they were sent to the press.

10th Nov. 1830.

1. The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the United States. It is argued that the study of the history of the United States is essential for a full understanding of the country and its people. The paper then discusses the various methods used by historians to study the past, including the use of primary and secondary sources, and the importance of critical thinking in the study of history.

2. The second part of the paper discusses the role of the United States in the world. It is argued that the United States has played a significant role in the world since the end of the Second World War, and that this role has been both positive and negative. The paper then discusses the various ways in which the United States has influenced the world, including through its economic power, its military power, and its cultural influence.

3. The third part of the paper discusses the future of the United States. It is argued that the United States faces many challenges in the future, including the challenges of a changing global environment, the challenges of a changing domestic population, and the challenges of a changing world order. The paper then discusses the various ways in which the United States can meet these challenges, including through the use of its economic power, its military power, and its cultural influence.

4. The fourth part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the United States. It is argued that the study of the history of the United States is essential for a full understanding of the country and its people. The paper then discusses the various methods used by historians to study the past, including the use of primary and secondary sources, and the importance of critical thinking in the study of history.
